(a) the current course; or
(b) a course which, disregarding any intervening vacation, the person undertook immediately before undertaking the current course is to be considered to be ordinarily resident in the place from which the person moved.
Periods of absence
When considering whether an applicant for support has been ordinarily resident throughout the prescribed three-year period preceding the start of the first academic year of a course, an exception is made where this condition cannot be satisfied because the applicant or a specified family member has been temporarily employed or absent abroad. This provides flexibility for people who are not able to meet the residence requirements but have not made a long-term decision to live outside the country.

Examples of temporary employment include:
- in the case of members of the regular naval, military or air forces of the Crown, any period which they serve outside the United Kingdom as members of such forces; and
- in the case of members of the regular armed forces of an EEA State or Switzerland, any period which they serve outside of the territory comprising the European Economic Area and Switzerland as members of such forces; and
- in the case of members of the regular armed forces of Turkey, any period which they serve outside of the territory comprising the European Economic Area, Switzerland and Turkey as members of such forces.

An assessment of whether an individual would meet the residency eligibility criteria can only be made at the time an application is made and is dependent upon their personal circumstances at that time. Eligibility for funding is based around evidence to establish that the applicant’s absence was temporary and the individual had every intention to return to the UK.

If the applicant is successful with their application they would be asked to provide documentary evidence (e.g. copies of temporary contract documents etc) to support their declaration that their absence was temporary.
